IAFF Foundation Expands Mission of Helping Fire Fighters

Foundation created “By Fire Fighters For Fire Fighters” is boosting efforts to support professional fire fighters and emergency medical personnel

WASHINGTON, DC – The IAFF Foundation, created By Fire Fighters For Fire Fighters, is expanding its philanthropic efforts with a new look, new leadership, and more ways to help fire fighters and their families in times of need.

With a new design and easy-to-navigate website, the IAFF Foundation is giving those with generous hearts more opportunities to help those who help others in their communities.

“Our members are on the frontlines every day, putting the needs of others before their own. But what happens when they are the ones who need help? The IAFF Foundation is here to assist our members following natural disasters, burn injuries and occupational illness, as well as provide scholarships to children of fallen fire fighters and assist families attending the annual Fallen Fire Fighter Memorial service,” says IAFF General President Edward Kelly.

The IAFF Foundation relies on charitable contributions to fund its important mission: To Help Those Who Help Others. Programs funded by the IAFF Foundation include Disaster Relief, Fallen Fire Fighter Memorial, Burn Support and Summer Camp, Survivor Scholarships, Behavioral Health and Wellness and Occupational Cancer Support.

“I am proud to support the IAFF Foundation’s mission to assist those who put their lives on the line every day to help others. From cancer to trauma exposure, from natural disasters to burn injury, IAFF members can depend on the Foundation to be there for them,” says Deputy Director of Foundation Management for the IAFF Foundation Jenny Hanie.

While professional fire fighters and emergency medical personnel across the United States and Canada race towards danger to keep the public safe, the IAFF Foundation follows closely behind to support these brave and selfless individuals in their time of need.
